

politics, the terms 'left' and 'right' are often used. On a scale of 1 to 10, where 1 is 'far left' and 10 is 'far right,' where would you place yourself?”. This information provides insight into voters' perceptions of Andalusian political parties (Fig. S2.1).

S3. Voter Perceptions of Political Ideology and Catalan Independence in Catalonia

The CEO (Centre d'Estudis d'Opinió) conducted a personal survey to gather the perceptions of Catalan society on politics, media, electoral behaviour, and the evaluation of political leaders. In the first wave of “Baròmetre d'Opinió Política” (Centre d'Estudis d'Opinió, 2019), with data collected in March 2019, citizens were asked two specific questions regarding how they perceived the parties they voted for. The first question asked voters of a particular party: “When people talk about politics, they often use the terms 'left' and 'right'. Could you tell me where you would place yourself on a scale from 0 to 10, where 0 means far left and 10 means far right? (Parliament of Catalonia)”. The second question asked: “Do you want Catalonia to become an independent state?”. This information provides insight into voters' perceptions of Catalan political parties, covering the ideological spectrum and their position on Catalan independence (Fig. S3.1).

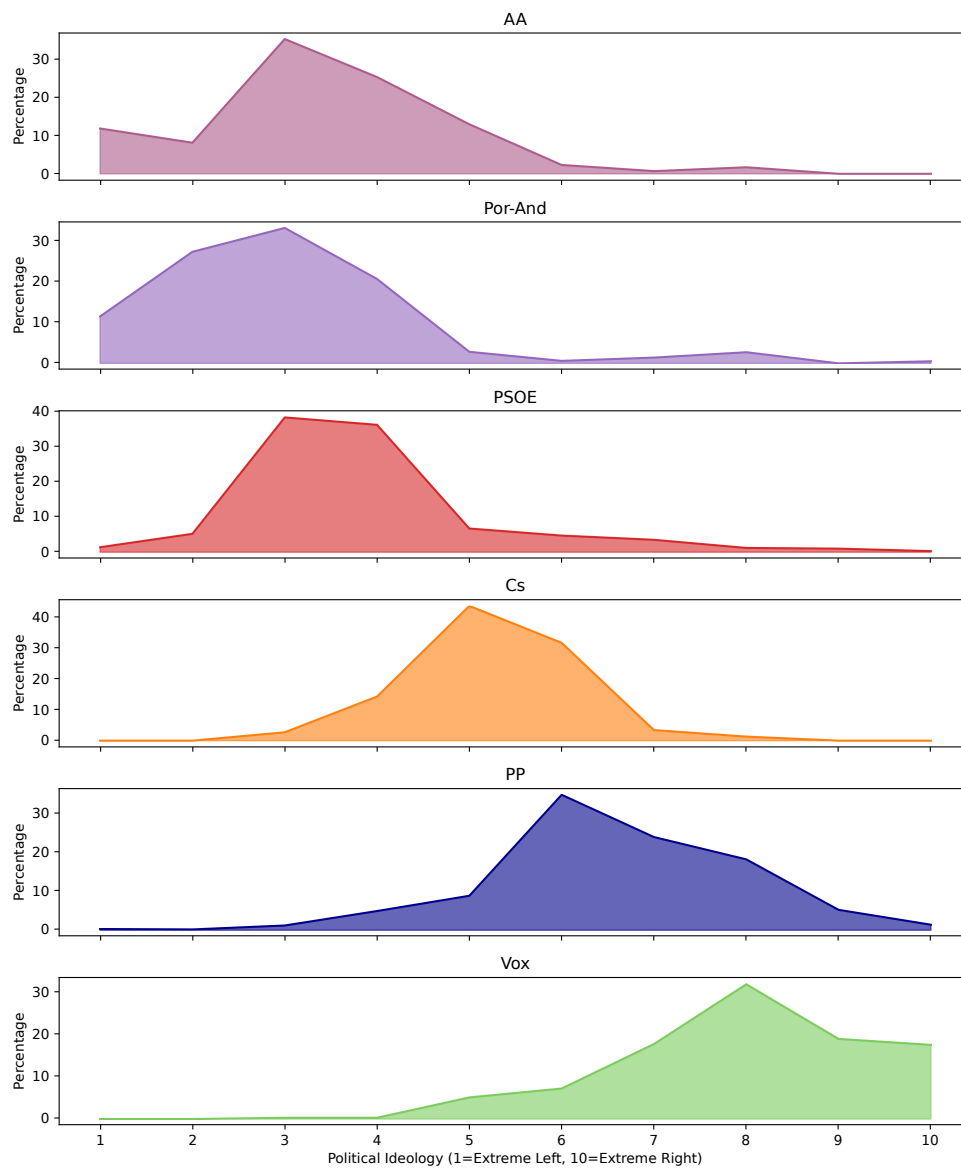

Fig. S2.1 Perception of political ideology for each Andalusian party based on the “Barómetro Andaluz, Estudio de Opinión Pública de Andalucía (March 2022)”

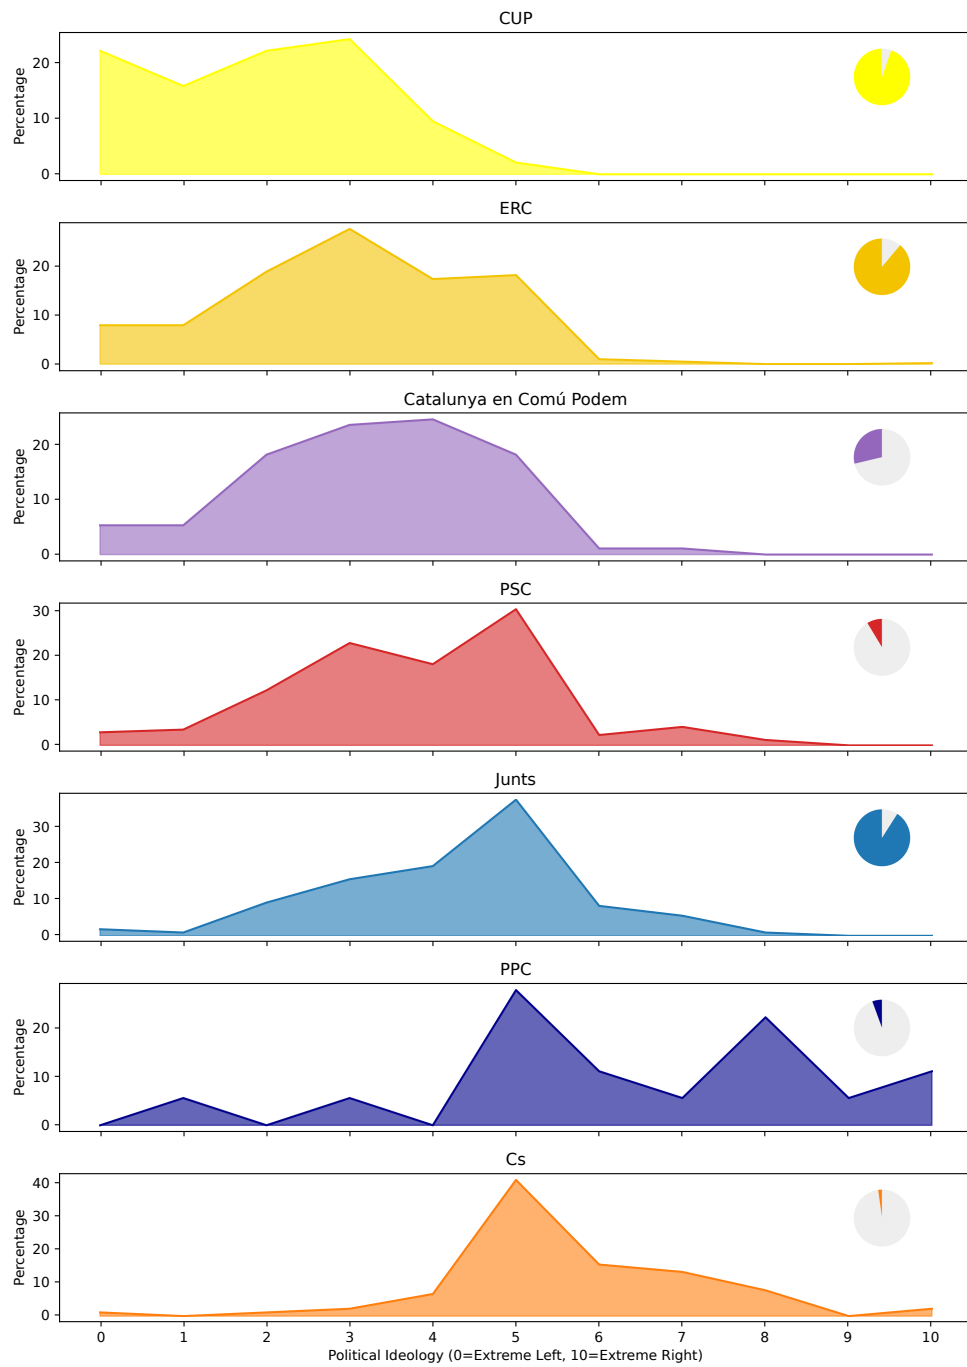

Fig. S3.1 Perception of political ideology and position of Catalan independence for each Catalan party based on the “Baròmetre d’Opinió Política (March 2019)”